The Memphis Avalanche asks this question because the air to which Mr. ar icle of freight in their lives. Randall's song was set was played by a brass band at the inaugural. We don't believe it does live! It died at Appomattox, and only its ghost, the tune, revisits the earth. This writer confesses to a very meagre acquaintance the mugwumps. But the playing of the sir with which they were associated at the inaugural of a President of the United States, shows the forgetfulness and forgiveness, by both sides, of the passions and animosities of those mad times when the words were supposed to mean something.

THE SCHOOL FOR CRIME.

Ex-Warden Tom Waters didn't shoot wide of the mark when he said the penitentiary was a school for crime. It has been proved at least in one instance that this characterization of the State prison is true.

Witnesses for the defense in the Banner libel suit testified that the convicts were frequently worked on Sunday, and the prosecution answered by way of confession and avoidance that they were paid extra for this work.

Convicts are sent to the penitentiary to be punished for crimes committed with the hope of reforming them and turning them out better men than cannot be very easily accomplished while the lessees not only permit but induce them to further violations of the law while they are serving out their terms of imprisonment.

This practice of itself shows the greed of the lessees and their utter disregard of the convict's welfare. It demonstrates the looseness with which the State officials supervise the branch prisons, (for it is to those institutions that this accusation is confined.) and it brings discredit on the State that such a thing should be allowed.

A VERY ungracious citizen has sug gested to us that our Mr. Munford m the condition of the old maid who went into the woods to pray for a husband and heard the owl hoot. The antiquated female said, "anybody, good Lord," and Mr. Munford is now crying for any kind of a commission just so it is a commission with good salaries attached. He went into the secret conclave composed of Vertrees, Trousdale, White, Blackburn, New. Bagwell, Manson and Johnson, of Wil liamson, which evolved the commis sion bill introduced simultaneously into the House and the Senate. The action of the Senate demonstrated that law, and then Mr. Mumford introduced might be the state of the Nation's cur- work.
